WELCOME

Welcome to the 44rd Annual Convention of the American Association on Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (AAIDD) Texas Chapter! The convention is in beautiful Corpus Christi again this year, where you can explore miles of beaches, visit some interesting cultural and historical venues, shop at local gift stores and boutiques, and dine at some wonderful local restaurants. Enjoy yourself and bring your family so all of you can explore Corpus Christi and the Texas Coast!

The Convention Program Committee has prepared an interesting and informative program designed to appeal to all participants including professionals, direct support staff, administrators, self-advocates, and family members. Presentations provided this week are designed to increase your knowledge and skills in order to provide better services and supports for the persons we serve. We also strive to empower self-advocates and families so they can better access the services and supports available to them and advocate for services that they need. Professional Development and Continuing Education credits are available.

The theme this year is Navigating Change: SAILING INTO THE FUTURE which reflects the changes and challenges faced by all service providers and service recipients in Texas during this legislative year. You will want to attend those sessions that provide information about legislative changes and the impact they may have on services. The session on the last day of the convention is particularly interesting as we hear from the leaders of various organizations discuss their knowledge about service changes. They will provide information about changes made during the legislative session and their potential impact.

One major goal of our convention is to provide you with additional tools and knowledge through networking, information sharing and sessions that empower you to deal with challenges and change as a service provider or recipient. This time away from your daily routine is a chance to recharge your battery and renew your focus.

We are very pleased to welcome anyone attending the convention for the first time and proud to welcome back many of the participants who have attended in the past! We encourage you to participate in the convention sessions and social events. Don't forget to place your bids on items in the Silent Auction! Share your experiences and network with others! We have a great group of presenters who are looking forward to sharing their knowledge and expertise and every participant has an opportunity to share their information with others.

On behalf of the Board of Directors of AAIDD Texas Chapter, and the Convention Planning Committee, thank you for coming! Enjoy your convention!!

The Plan is Not the Thing....Discovery Is!

The Federal rule is clear that person centered plans must be developed for people receiving HCBS services. Person Centered Thinking is the foundation that facilitates discovery of what is important to a person and what is important for a person. This discovery leads to plans with outcomes that change lives. The presentation will offer learners an overview of person-centered practices with an opportunity to practice person centered thinking skills. The curriculum for this training was developed by Michael Smull and The International Learning Community on Person Centered Practices (ILCPCP) Certified Trainers and reflects CMS requirements. The final component of the training will address Outcome statements as developed by the ILCPCP.

- Jeff Garrison-Tate, M.Ed., Program Manager, The Center on Disability Studies, The University of Texas at Austin

1 – 4:30 p.m.

PRE-CONVENTION WORKSHOP

Issues with Aging, Dementia and IDD

This presentation will discuss issues that affect the growing number of persons with intellectual and developmental disabilities that are reaching middle and older age. Issues include diseases that affect cognitive decline, health issues, decline in social support, transition issues such as retirement, and special issues that affect older adults such as substance abuse.

The presentation will discuss the impact of aging on caregivers as well, including issues of transference and related concerns. This program will be helpful for all persons working with an aging population. It will also be helpful for any person who is aging. The program will include information on the National Task Group (NTG) and the National Alzheimer's Program focusing on the inclusion of special populations in the federal program directives and goals.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

1. Busting Out of the Boring Fitness Routine

Do you want to jazz up the fitness program at your Day Habilitation program? Are your participants bored with the same old exercise and stretching videos? Physical activity is important for many aspects of people's lives but finding the right combination of motivation, resources, and energy is where many programs stumble. Come hear about a new program that was developed where the participants are EXCITED and ENGAGED, and has grown exponentially over the past 2 years. Learn what worked and what didn't during the implementation process. Get inspired to start a fun and challenging fitness program at your location!

- Margaret Sachs, Voc Hab Manager, Texana Center
- Manuel Lopez, Jr., Education and Employment Manager, Texana Center

2. IDEA and Functional Behavior Assessment: Implementation in Schools

The functional behavior assessment (FBA) and function based behavior intervention plan (BIP) are integral to the success of students with disabilities experiencing behavioral challenges. In this session, presenters share their professional experiences and findings from a survey conducted with educators in schools to determine how FBAs are conducted and BIPs are developed and implemented. Through examination of the results of the survey the presenters will define and describe the FBA and BIP from the standpoint of accepted professional practice and will discuss how efforts in the schools compare. The implications for students with challenging behaviors will also be discussed.

- Andria Young, Ph.D., Professor, Special Education, University of Houston Victoria
- Terrisa Cortines, M.Ed., Educational Diagnostician, Adjunct Professor, University of Houston Victoria

3. Integrating Assessment and Treatment for People Who are Dually Diagnosed

People who are dually diagnosed, with an intellectual disability and a mental illness, present challenges in services to caregivers, families and professionals. Often, co-occurring behavior challenges can further complicate outcomes. Using an integrated approach to assess and treat behavioral health can provide the support these individuals require. Failure to use an integrated approach can result in incarceration, psychiatric placement, or jeopardize community placement. Integration of various technologies into traditional therapeutic interventions can be used to reduce crises and improve outcomes.

- Jose Levy, LPA, Associate Psychologist, Behavior Analyst, Behavior Solutions

4. One Page Descriptions....It's About All of Us!

This session will provide learners with a brief overview of person centered practices and person centered thinking. Learners will practice person centered thinking skills and connect the skills to a draft of their own one-page description. Learners will be encouraged to recognize how discovery of what is important to and for a person informs action planning. Presentation will provide participants an overview and opportunity to practice Person Centered Thinking skills that lead to discovery of what is important to and for their loved one and how best to support them to get a better life... as they define it. Participants will also learn how to use Person Centered Thinking skills for conflict resolution leading to goals and objectives centered on how best to support the person. This presentation and the skill development is applicable to any planning process that addresses education and service delivery goals.

2. Getting to “Yes!” – Empowering Choice and Autonomy for Individuals with IDD

Individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities can experience feelings of disempowerment. Oftentimes, these feelings stem from lack of autonomy and choice within one’s own life. This powerlessness can lead to depression and anger. However, providing choice and autonomy can be difficult and scary, especially for caretakers, family members, and guardians. This presentation focuses on reconciling an individual’s goals with the support they need to be safe and successful.

Examining the dynamic relationship between symptomatology and the aforementioned variables will be discussed in a manner to address potential risk and protective factors in caregivers of children and adults diagnosed with an Intellectual and Developmental Disability. As caregivers report high levels of depression and anxiety, low levels of stigma, and high levels of familism, the clinical implications for clinical assessments, screenings will be compared and presented. 1. Puberty and IDD: Health, Safety and Empowerment

Puberty is a natural developmental stage to be celebrated by youth and their families. Intimate conversations can bring families closer during a time when young people typically pull away. People with IDD experience injury, disease and exploitation at higher rates than the general population. Providers and caregivers often misinterpret puberty related behaviors, resulting in admonishment rather than support. This presentation provides skills to nurture youth who grapple with unfamiliar urges and frustration. Appropriate guidance helps people with IDD experience more dignity and inclusion. Sexual health education empowers individuals to protect themselves from exploitation and disease, and enhances quality of life.

This presentation will address major ethical issues in services to people with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Key practice issues include consent requirements, guardianship decisions, eligibility assessment & diagnosis, and special ethical issues in service delivery, treatment, and advocacy. Various professional codes of ethics will be analyzed. The session will conclude with a discussion of ethical issues faced by members of the audience.

- Ellis M. (Pat) Craig, Ph.D., Consultant Psychologist
- Ollie J. Seay, Ph.D., Clinical Assistant Professor, Texas State University

3. Music and Speech: Are They Related?

Music and speech, two important components of daily life, portray different purposes. As different as they may seem, they share many characteristics, most of which are not easily visible. Ongoing research has proved that several neural modules are similarly involved in music and speech. This means that speech functions can benefit from music functions and vice versa. In this class, we will look at the latest discoveries on speech/language development and rehabilitation, and the latest discoveries about music's neurological impact on the brain. We will then look at how music therapy affects brain development, and enhances speech rehabilitation.
